Smarter technology for a Smarter Planet:

Is it possible to build a supply chain that delivers intelligence?

Right now, roughly $1.2 trillion in excess merchandise is stockpiled in retail supply chains resulting in $93 billion in lost sales every year. The reality is, supply chains today represent a significant source of risk to businesses due to constant cost fluctuations. Can that financial exposure be drastically reduced within the supply chain?

IBM's answer to cost volatility is to build flexibility directly into supply chains using advanced business analytics and automation technology. By inter-connecting everything from customers, to suppliers, to IT systems, to parts. Allowing businesses to realign quickly by shifting workloads around the globe, and expanding or contracting inventory based on shifting customer demand and market costs. This kind of flexibility is helping companies like Pfizer reduce complexity and cut costs by 25%. In fact, IBM is infusing intelligence into 17 of the world's top 25 supply chains.

Right now, roughly $1.2 trillion in excess merchandise is stockpiled in retail supply chains resulting in $93 billion in lost sales every year. The reality is, supply chains today represent a significant source of risk to businesses due to constant cost fluctuations. Can that financial exposure be drastically reduced within the supply chain?

A smarter business needs smarter thinking. Let's build a smarter planet.

STED: Ryfylkeveien, Sandnes

STØRRELSE: 200 m²

FASE: Ferdigstillet 2008

Boligen utgjør en del av et gårdsanlegg grensende mot Høgsfjorden i Sandnes kommune. Programmet er en familiebolig med atelier, tilpasset gårdsbygningenes skala og materialbruk. Det er lagt spesiell vekt på bærekraftig arkitektur, med hensyn til energibruk og materialvalg.

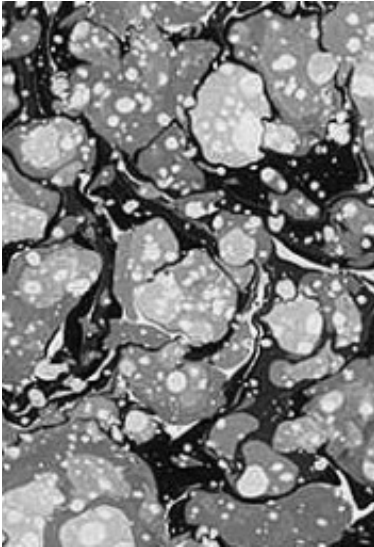

Situasjonen er en praktfull, skrånende eiendom med utsikt til fjorden mot øst. Boligtomten går sømløst over i kulturbeitene som omgir eiendommen, samtidig som den er en integrert del av gårdsbebyggelsen med driftsbygninger og eksisterende boliger.

Et hovedanliggende var å oppnå en landskapsmessig og arkitektonisk tilpassing Les mer

ALAN

What do you offer?

Graphic design for Print and Digital and Coding/Development. With a combined science and graphic design background, I am able to see connections in how technology and graphic design can work together and influence one another throughout the process. In terms of designing for digital media or the web, I think it is important to have a foundation in both the technological fundamentals as well as the design aesthetic as they are ultimately tightly bound to one another; with an understanding of both aspects, the end product is elevated by knowing what is possible and how to execute it well.

What do you consider the most exciting part in a creative process?

I think that I am inspired by working with clients that have an energy for and interest in working together to create something they would not have originally imagined. There is nothing more exciting than finding a solution that both myself and the client are surprised by and ecstatic about.

Where do you relax or get inspired?

Anywhere there is good food, music or friends.

Your favorite local places...

The Vietnamese market in Lichtenberg has the best Pho I have ever eaten in Berlin. Cocolo has the best Ramen possibly in all of Germany. Katie's Blue Cat for coffee and fresh bread. I think it would truly be a lie to leave Berghain/Panorama out of this list.

What is beauty?

To me, it is any form of honest and humble expression.
